

Advocating for Long Island Business

HIA-LI President & CEO Terri Alessi-Miceli and Director of Business Development Anthony Forgione, along with Suffolk County Executive Ed Romaine, Town of Smithtown Supervisor Ed Wehrheim, and additional local elected officials, dignitaries, and business organizations, congratulated Mason Technologies' leadership team, including Founder, President, and CEO Jennifer Mason and Vice President of Partner Relations Adam Mason, at their groundbreaking ceremony to celebrate the construction of their new corporate headquarters in the Long Island Innovation Park at Hauppauge. The Innovation Park is the second largest industrial park in the United States after Silicon Valley.

This $30 million investment represents the company's major expansion in Suffolk County. Their state-of-the-art facility will support the company's continued growth, housing Mason's more than 230 full-time employees, with plans to add 25 additional positions within two years of completion.

Founded in 2002, Mason Technologies is a national leader in low-voltage technology integration, delivering innovative solutions in structured cabling, audiovisual systems, data centers, and unified security. With locations on Long Island, New York City, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Florida, Mason Technologies has completed more than 100,000 projects nationwide and installs an average of more than 10 million feet of cable and fiber annually. Mason Technologies is a Suffolk County and nationally certified Women's Business Enterprise (WBE).

Congratulations also to HIA-LI Board Chair Anthony Manetta, CEO of Standard Advisors Group, and Board Members Devin Kulka, CEO of The Kulka Group, and Kelly Murphy, Executive Director/CEO of the Suffolk County Industrial Development Agency, for helping get this project off the ground!

HIA-LI was proud to attend Hauppauge High School's Career Fair: Muffins with Mentors. We enjoyed joining some of our members in connecting with students and sharing experiences and guidance as they continue to build towards their futures. Thank you to the Hauppauge School District for inviting us to be a part of this engaging and impactful morning!

HIA-LI's Economic Development Task Force brought together regional leaders and industry experts for an engaging discussion on "The Economic Engine of Tourism & Travel on Long Island." Moderated by HIA-LI board member Joe Campolo, the program explored how transportation, hospitality, and destination marketing work together to fuel economic growth across the region. Islip Town Supervisor Angie Carpenter, Long Island MacArthur Airport Commissioner Rob Schneider, and Discover Long Island COO Sharon Wyman, CDME provided expert insights on the opportunities and momentum shaping the future of tourism on Long Island.

Thank you again to our wonderful panel, to Strata Alliance for sponsoring, and to Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP for hosting the group for this impactful discussion.